Robison Elected to City Board of Directors

George Robison, retired business man, was elected to the City Manager Board of Directors yesterday in the only contested post in a citywide vote. He defeated Cecil Delaney, grocer, by an unofficial 204 to 92 tally.

Other unopposed members of the 7-man board are Roy Trash, George Frazier, L. W. Young, Sam Andrews, Frank Douglas and Herbert Burns.

Thus, come Monday the new government will take over the reins of the city and the first action will be to seek a city manager. The new board was drafted to run by a citizens committee following an election April 23 in which the new type of government was approved by local voters by a 3 to 1 margin.

13 Stories Heard in Libel Trial

By JACK LEFLER

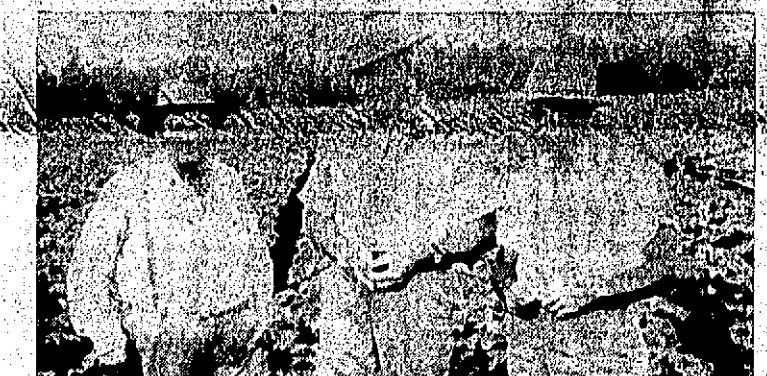

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thirteen stories accusing movie stars of illicit amorous adventures have been poured into the ears of jurors in the criminal libel trial of Confidential and Whisper magazines. Prosecuting attorneys gave the recital yesterday in an attempt to prove that the magazines libeled the subjects of the articles and published low and obscene matter. The stories have provoked libel suits asking nearly 35 million dollars.

And more sex-packed stories are to flow from the witness stand when the trial resumes tomorrow after being in recess today. Arguments will be heard today on the prosecution's attempt to bar the defense from calling nearly 100 movie celebrities as witnesses to ask them if stories written about them were true. The prosecution contends such testimony would be immaterial to the 10 stories on which the grand jury indictment was based.

Also to be argued is a defense motion to eliminate the criminal

Many Acres Flooded in Searcy Area

SEARCY, Ark. — Several thousand acres of crops have been lost by flooding of the rain-swollen Little Red River in Cleburne and White counties.

Four hundred acres of corn, 320 acres of cotton and 750 acres of soybeans were washed away in one section near Judsonia. A protective levee was destroyed by floods in last spring and landowners had not been able to replace it before the new overflow hit as a result of torrential rains early this week. The Little Red was 24.9 feet high on the gauge at Judsonia yesterday. The reading is nearly five feet above flood stage. The U. S. Weather Bureau at Little Rock said the stream was expected to crest at 38 feet eight feet above flood stage.

All Around Town

Whatever the decision of the powers that be, the Little League baseball playoff has ended in quite a mess. It seems one team has played a boy who is overage. This was brought out in the second game of the playoff series at a time when everybody was on hand and ready to play. The game was cancelled and everybody went home. Naturally the good of the local baseball setup for youths far offsets the bad but still there are some bad phases. And if the program here is to continue they must be corrected. There is at least one case which borders on outright subsidization and although several have been asked if nobody look any open action then there should be some way to keep the leagues from getting lopsided with one and maybe two teams outclassing the rest. But perhaps the most damaging thing is that almost without exception the parents and managers in many cases are not unselfish although they are pressured by parents for many a boy sets out the season on the bench and some rarely get to play in a game. And many drop out altogether, although the program is supposed to be for everyone. Why don't we give the game back to the boys by getting up a rule requiring every manager to play every boy on his squad at least an inning in every game? Wouldn't that be a fair way or is winning among ourselves so necessary?

It seems pretty certain that Prosecuting Attorney Travis Martin will appoint Louis Crain as his assistant in Hempstead, replacing C. V. Nunn, Jr.

Reportedly the old Julia Chester Hospital building has been leased to Mrs. Maude Cooper, Texarkana, who intends to turn it into a rest home for the aged.

Ironically the late E. S. Greening built the building which now houses the insurance agency he founded an Hope Federal Savings and Loan Association. This was discovered by Fred Ellis during remodeling of the building. An iron plaque bearing the name of E. S. Greening Jr., 1901, was uncovered. Mr. Ellis had the plaque placed in the cement at the front of the new structure.

Nightriding Charges Are Dismissed

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Municipal Judge Milton McLees today dismissed night riding charges against five young Negroes whom State Police recently arrested after finding four shotguns in their car.

One of the boys reportedly told an officer the five were en route to settle a dispute.

Judge McLees told police to keep the shotguns.

The night riding statute is an old Arkansas law originally aimed at the Ku Klux Klan.

Storms Lash Sections of Arkansas

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms, wind and some hail were reported across Arkansas last night, but nothing was severe enough to leech off the major floods or widespread damage which occurred early this week.

Sheriff Ray Holmes of Polk County said a home near Harrisburg was destroyed by fire after being struck by lightning. There were reports of trees limbs scattered over an area around Trumann by high winds. Trumann got 2.6 inches of rain last night.

The erroneous report that a tornado had been sighted near the Little Rock Air Force Base caused a flurry of excitement. A lower operative reported seeing a funnel about 9 p. m. during a shower. A weather observer in the tower said it was only a cloud formation.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Little Rock said 5.20 inches of rain fell at Abbott near Fort Smith in the 24-hour period ending at 6 a. m. today.

Other rainfall measurements included 2.60 at Danville, 1.31 at Fort Smith, 1.81 at Des Arc and 1.08 at Dardanelle.

Faubus Beating Drums for a Special Session

By BRYCE B. MILLER

LITTLE ROCK (UP) — There is no hope for additional highway construction work this year and a special session of the Legislature is the only answer if a full program of construction and maintenance is to be scheduled next year, Gov. Orval Faubus said today.

The governor refused to be moved down, however, on a decision to call the extraordinary session. He said he believed the public must be convinced first that a special session is necessary and shown what benefits can be derived from it.

"There is no hope of getting through the remainder of the summer construction period without serious curtailment of work," Faubus told newsmen.

He pointed out that even if a special session were called immediately, there would be no chance for the Highway Department to program work and get it underway before the bad weather set in again in the fall and winter.

He added that if a "fully implemented" program is to be scheduled next year, "a special session will have to be called this fall."

Asked if he considered a special session the only answer to the Highway Department's current money problems, the governor replied, "There is no question about it."

He said he would not make a decision on the special session at this time because the public is not aware of the facts and information on the situation.

"Whatever the facts or information may be, they should be known to the people so they will understand the reason for a special session and the benefits to be derived from it," Faubus said.

A reporter asked if he meant by this statement the Highway Department had revealed the true facts behind its financially embarrassed condition, Faubus replied, "I do not mean to imply anything. The people can read what I have said and draw their own conclusions."

The controversy over the Highway Department's tight money problem, apparently, is a little better than when the commission announced several weeks ago it must lighten its belt on local work and halt further programming on the multi-million-dollar federal highway system.

Projects on primary and secondary roads are at a standstill, and the commission believed at first it had enough money to pay contractors on major projects only through Aug. 15. Later, financial aid in the form of $1,500,000 government check allowed the commission to continue payments in full through Sept. 15.

The Highway Commission says it has only enough money to continue on page Three.

Ike Is Ignored as Committee Again Cuts Foreign Aid

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The full House Appropriations Committee today brushed aside a new plea from President Eisenhower — the third this week — and slashed $109,050,000 from foreign aid funds.

The action came on the heels of a White House statement, directed to the committee, asking for restoration of the money "in the conviction that the national interests of this country are deeply involved."

The sequence was about the same as yesterday's.

Then Eisenhower in a special news conference, a session such as he has never held before, appealed for all of the $3,867,083,000 which Congress had set as the ceiling in an authorization bill. He had just signed that figure itself is half a billion less than Eisenhower originally said was needed.

Eisenhower survived notice that he will call a special session of Congress to get more money if he finds U. S. interests jeopardized by lack of funds.

Disregarding the special session talk, an Appropriations subcommittee in a 3½-hour closed session last night made the $109,050,000 cut which the full 50-member committee approved today.

The week's first Eisenhower plea for foreign aid money was made to a congressional group last night.

The new Eisenhower statement came while the full committee was working on the bill.

In its final committee form the measure allows $2,524,700,000 in new money for the overseas program in the year which started July 1.

With a cut-over of $667,050,000 from previous appropriations, this gives Eisenhower $1,213,200,000 less than he first said was needed.

Before the full committee acted today Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts said Eisenhower won't stand for the cut the subcommittee made.

"It's too deep a cut," Martin said. "The President won't stand for this. This will not permit him to keep his commitments."

The new presidential statement bore out Martin's prediction on how Eisenhower would view the subcommittee action.

It did not, however, go into the matter of a special session or anything else Eisenhower might do about it.

The full committee report, written by Rep. Passman (D-La.) who headed the subcommittee, said the group has evidence that the funds approved are more than adequate to keep the program operating effectively.

It said the committee noted that the unexpended balance for the mutual security program last June 30 was $6,195,000,000. That, with the new money recommended, would give the agency $6,719,760,000.

By LEWIS GULICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Leader Martin (Mass.) said today President Eisenhower won't stand for a new $800,000,000 slash in his foreign aid program voted by a House Appropriations subcommittee.

"It's too deep a cut," Martin said. "The President won't stand for this. This will not permit him to keep his commitments."

Only a few hours before the subcommittee acted, Eisenhower himself told a hurriedly summoned special news conference he will have to call a special session of Congress if United States interests are jeopardized by a lack of needed foreign aid funds.

Martin served notice he will fight to get the House to restore the amount that the subcommittee voted to cut last night.

The subcommittee, by divided vote, sliced to $2,524,760,000 the proposed new appropriations for the year started July 1.

This sum, plus $667,350,000 carry-over approved from previously appropriated funds, would give Eisenhower ($1,280,260,000) less than the amount he originally said was needed to help bolster free world strength during the year.

GOP leaders expected the Democratic-controlled full Appropriations Committee would go along with the subcommittee and send the bill to the floor today.

As in his previous pleas, Eisenhower took the stand today that even the full authorization bill figures would hamper programs designed for the country's best interests.

"To President," the statement said, "is gravely concerned over these cuts. In the conviction that the national interests of this country are deeply involved, he sincerely hopes that final congressional action will restore the amounts to those authorized by the Congress yesterday."

Congress authorized $3,367,083,000, but the subcommittee voted to slash this by $808,650,000 in acting on a bill making the actual appropriation.

"The President said yesterday that the cuts already made in the authorization bill were of such nature as to hamper the programs designed for the best interests of the United States and the free world," said today's White House statement.

Zebra marching in file across the Africa veldt, are seldom heard. But, they are not quiet. They make a sort of "quag" sound resembling a slight cough.

Anderson to Clarify Weight Lifting Art

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Paul Anderson, the 360-pound Georgia boy who didn't stop growing, aims to bring showmanship to the ungentle art of lifting weights.

"There hasn't been a real star in the strong-man business since Sandow," said Paul, referring to the turn-of-the-century Hercules promoted by Flo Ziegfeld. "And even Sandow wasn't the strongest man in his day. But he had showmanship."

Paul's feats would make Sandow seem a weakling. He whipped the Russians at the Olympics in Australia. He can raise 5,000 pounds in a back lift, 550 over head, and do deep knee bends with 1,000.

So far he has made appearances on the Ed Sullivan show, at wrestling matches, fairs and in a night club in Reno.

How does he feel? "Lugging around 300 pounds on his 5-foot, 11-inch frame."

"I feel great," remarked the 34-year-old pride of Toconog, Cal. "No, it's not hard for me to get around. If I were fat, that would be different. But I'm all muscle, and muscle carries itself; it's not a burden."

"I'm pretty light on my feet. Matter of fact, I can run the 100 yard dash in 12 seconds."

"I always was pretty big," he said. "Then when I was in high school, I was playing football and I decided lifting weights would get me in better condition. Pretty soon I got so interested in weights that football fell by the wayside. I rose from 240 pounds to my present weight."

"I don't eat an awful lot," Paul said. "I might have some orange juice and milk for breakfast with a protein food substitute. I work out during the day, so I seldom eat any lunch. For dinner I might have a steak. I average three quarts of milk a day."

"I don't worry about ever getting fat because I've never been too interested in food. I could diet and never suffer."

State Crops Show Good Progress

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The federal state crop reporting service says Arkansas crops showed good progress last week except in areas of the west and northwest which needed more moisture.

These sections got heavy rain fall early this week. The agency said yesterday that cotton was continuing to fruit heavily, soybean prospects were good, rice growth was favorable, corn was doing well and sorghums showed excellent growth.

Twining Takes Over as Joint Chief of Staff

By G. VATES McDaniel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air Force Gen. Nathan F. Twining takes over today as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, succeeding Adm. Arthur W. Radford. The shift signals a change in the personalities or thinking of the military high command.

Gen. Twining is moving into a job that he knows already, from four years of service as Air Force representative on the Joint Chiefs. Even before he became Air Force chief of staff in June 1953, he had sat in as vice chief for the acting Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg.

One of Twining's first major tasks will be to set forth to the new secretary of defense what the current economy campaign is doing to the national security.

Neil H. McElroy has been nominated to succeed Secretary Charles E. Wilson, and is expected to take over about Oct. 1 when the Pentagon is busy drafting the military budget for next year.

Twining, 60, is a combat veteran of both the Pacific and Atlantic theaters in World War II. He becomes the third chairman of the Joint Chiefs, and the first Air Force officer named to that post.

If Twining follows the current thinking of the Air Force, he will spend some of his time with his fellow chiefs in trying to convince them that the ought to catch up with Air Force concepts of warfare in the nuclear age.

Woman, 70, Tells How She Survived

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—A 70-year-old grandmother who can't swim says she and a young rescuer, just hung on to a buoyant mattress and floated and prayed during a 17-hour ordeal in the Caribbean.

"My heart was all right with God," said Mrs. Ruth Nelson of Bradenton, Fla., last night.

Mrs. Nelson was swept into the sea Monday night when the prayer-cruise schooner Jacon fled over sharply in a sudden storm two miles off the Haitian coast near Miragane.

Mrs. John Shuler, wife of the pastor of the First Methodist Church at Paris, Tex., was carried overboard at the same time but she managed to grab a rope and was hauled back aboard the schooner.

Bill Dozier, 17, of Sarasota, Fla., leaped into the storm-lashed sea in an effort to reach Mrs. Nelson.

"When the storm struck I was sitting on a mattress on deck beside Mrs. Shuler," Mrs. Nelson said. "In a flash we were in the water and the next thing I knew was that Bill Dozier had grabbed me and a mattress came floating right into our arms."

"The waves were high and it rained," she continued. "I managed to get my chin on the mattress, and as it got soggy I wound my arms around a lump of it. Bill held on to one side and tried to swim beside me. Bill said it seemed we were in for it. I replied that my heart was all right with God and started to pray with him."

Mrs. Nelson said they floated and prayed until daylight. At dawn young Dozier began swimming and pushing the mattress in the direction of the shore.

Then a fishing boat approached.

"I shouted," said Mrs. Nelson. "Either they heard or saw me and came alongside, taking me and the mattress aboard. We went after Bill and in a few minutes he was in the boat too."

The rescued Floridians were returned to their schooner at Miragane, 50 miles from Port au Prince. Those aboard the vessel include 32 Methodist ministers on a prayer and preaching mission in the Caribbean.

Double-Crosser Gets Self Double-Crossed

Faubus Beating

Dear Dorothy Dix: A year ago I met and fell in love with a wonderful guy (while my husband was overseas). No need to tell you what happened. I just packed up and followed him. We had a fabulous few months together. Then a letter was forwarded from my husband, saying he'd be home in a few weeks. I went to meet him, told him my story and he said he'd think it out and decide what we should do. Now comes the real difficulty. Rod, my sweet heart, has been married before, and because it didn't work out, he says he'll never marry again. Just to be as we are, according to him, is enough. He's marvelous to me, bringing little gifts, coming home every night, helping with dinner, thinking up little surprises. If I go back to my husband, I'll have security the rest of my life, but I know I'll never be happy. Rod will always be upmost in my thoughts. I'm away from both men until I can make up my mind. What shall I do? I'm no child. I'm 30 years old.

Jill

Dear Jill: Your long letter details the fun you have with one man, the security you could have with the other. Good times and secure times. Is that all you think of? Does it ever occur to you that there are other things in life that you have a responsibility to that you ever give any thought to the moral issues involved? Well, suppose you do face the fact that riotous fun with Rod or dull security with your husband isn't the answer. To get the solution to your problem, you need a drastic reshuffling of values.

So far, the situation is tit for tat. You rejected your husband and are in turn being given the brushoff by Rod, at least matrimonial-wise.

What I suggest is a long conference with a clergyman. If anyone can, he will help you straighten out your moral and spiritual life. When you realize that there's some thing more to life than "fun," your problem will be solved.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Will you please say a word about relatives who consistently come to visit without first telephoning? They stay the evening, although invited guests may be present. I feel a simple telephone call to ask about our plans would be the courteous thing. This practice has led to considerable ill-feeling in the family and I have been criticized severely for demanding so much.

D. L. P.

Dear D. L. P.: You certainly aren't off-beat in your expectations. It is the courteous thing to do. But if you can't get your relatives to agree with you, don't make an international episode out of it. Keep emergency refreshments on hand, warn your invited guests that interruptions may occur, and keep smiling.

Dear Dorothy Dix: How old should a girl be before she gives a boy a good-night kiss?

Uncertain

Dear Uncertain: And who can be "certain" about kisses? Discretion, not age, alone dictates the time of a kiss. When in doubt, wait! If you'd like further reading on the subject, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for my leaflet, "The Petting Problem."

Dear Dorothy Dix: How would you write to a boy and tell him you don't like him without hurting his feelings?

Ruthie

Dear Ruthie: Can't you find an easier way to convey your feelings? The written word is so final, and you might change your mind some day. Get the same idea across by not being available, getting another boy friend, returning special presents or forgetting his birthday.

Here are the principals and the stories:

Mae West — Her alleged predilection for "muscle men" and her employment of a Negro boxer.

Robert Mitchell — the story called him "the nude who came to dinner." Mitchell sued Confidential for a million dollars, but the action was dismissed because of a question of jurisdiction.

Dick Powell and his wife June Allyson — "How long can Dick Powell take it?" the title asked.

The story said Miss Allyson was "A hubby snatcher" who carried on flirtations with her leading men.

Corinne Calvet — The French actress, according to the story, was overly demanding of affection from her husband John Bromfield, and later from actor Jeff Stone.

Jayne Mansfield and Mickey Hargray — The burlesque blonde entertained Mr. Universe in her home overnight. Confidential alleged.

Billy Daniels — The singer is accused of carrying on with a coal girl.

Fulbright Lashes Dulles as a 'Boob'

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles will look like a boob if the verdict of history agrees with the one just rendered by Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark).

The senator blasted Dulles—in a speech prepared for the Senate today—for his handling of Egyptian President Nasser, who retaliated by seizing the Suez Canal. The seizure of the canal led to last year's Mid-east war.

There won't be a final verdict for years; until the documents showing Dulles' policy on Egypt are finally opened to the public. But Fulbright has just examined many of those documents.

The weak spot in Fulbright's attack is his failure to show a motive for what Dulles did: other than the reasons given already by the secretary and the Eisenhower administration. And Fulbright won't accept those reasons.

Fulbright was chairman of a Senate subcommittee which was created Jan. 29 to study this country's whole Middle East policy since 1945. It collapsed and died July 30 without reaching conclusions, or making a report.

This was probably the real reason for the committee's quick end: it was made up of three Republicans and therefore would never reach agreement if it meant condemning Republican Dulles.

Fulbright, as it turns out, was all for condemning Dulles. Some of the reasons given for folding the committee to many documents to study and to many secret documents which couldn't be made public to back up conclusions.

This is the brief background: For years Egypt had wanted to build the Aswan dam, which would take the country out of the Middle Ages by developing irrigation and power for industry. The project was found to be sound.

Egypt said it would pay most of the cost but needed outside help. Russia offered the help. So did the United States. It proposed giving Egypt $4 million dollars on Dec. 16, 1955 and a total of 150 million over 10 years.

On July 19, 1956, Dulles suddenly canceled the American offer. He suggested Egypt couldn't afford such a dam after tying up her resources for arms purchases. This apparently angered Nasser, who quickly seized the Suez Canal.

Within a few months this led to the British-French-Israeli invasion of Egypt, a temporary split between this country and Britain and France, and anger throughout the Arab world.

The administration gave three reasons for withdrawing its help: Egypt couldn't afford the dam; where the dam would be built hadn't agreed to the building; Egypt couldn't afford the dam; and some members of Congress were opposed.

Fulbright said one of these was a valid reason, that actually the administration had begun to reconsider its offer a few weeks after it was made in late 1955.

Then what was Dulles' motive? This is a prime question. And Fulbright hasn't answered that. Was it, perhaps, to force a showdown with Russia, which had volunteered to help Egypt build the dam? Fulbright said he couldn't be sure of the basis of the documents furnished by the State Department. But he did say this country had no reason to believe Russia wouldn't make good. The dam hasn't been started yet.

But then Fulbright went on to picture Dulles as a pumbly who acted without realizing the food will this country would win in the Arab world if the dam were built or the harsh reaction in Egypt if the offer to help were withdrawn.

Fulbright blamed the withdrawal for Nasser's seizure of the canal, the invasion which followed and a big increase in Soviet influence in Egypt.

Police Work Overtime to Curb Crime

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Police have gone on 12-hour shifts in an effort to curb Kansas City's burgeoning crime rate.

After the first two nights, Chief Bernard C. Brannon reported 26.9 per cent fewer major crimes than on two comparable nights a year ago.

"We have accomplished the purpose," he declared.

"We hope to clear out some trouble spots by keeping them under surveillance. It's been our experience that when hoodlums see a policeman often enough around their favorite haunts they just seem to disappear into the night. And they're less likely to get drunk and into trouble."

The overtime shifts put 260 men on the streets at night. Brannon said officers are working an extra four hours a day without additional pay. Even administrative, clerical and laboratory specialists at headquarters are on the special night patrol. Forty-four unpaid reserve officers have pitched in, some of them furnishing their own automobiles.

The normal night-time force is 59 men in one-man patrol cars and three on walking beats downtown. The overtime has provided 25 additional walking beats.

Brannon said the plan was prompted by a 21.8 per cent increase in crimes in the first half of 1957, compared with 1956. He said the department is 105 men below authorized strength, largely because the pay scale for patrolmen is only $330 to $375 a month. He advocated an increase of 200 in the authorized strength.

Brannon also instituted a plan for making special checks around homes where women usually are alone at night. He specified the women will have to make written requests for the special protection.

Officers Must Pay for Door
LOS ANGELES (AP)—A private detective and a deputy marshal must pay $105.73 for the wrecking of the "wrong door" in the now famed apartment raid aimed at Marilyn Monroe.

Mrs. Virginia Blasen had tiled suit in Small Claims Court for the wrecking of her front door Nov. 5, 1954. When members of the raiding party discovered Miss Monroe was not there they left hurriedly. The actress was visiting a girl friend in an apartment next door.

Municipal Judge Harold C. Shepherd yesterday awarded Mrs. Blasen a default judgment of $100, plus $5.73 court costs. The defendants, who did not appear, were Barney Rudisberg, private investigator, and Deputy County Marshal Jack Stambler, who had loaned Rudisberg his license.

A fully developed thunderstorm cloud may measure more than four miles from its base to its top.

Men Are Beginning to Use Perfume More Often

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Very few businessmen today rub perfume on their ankles to help them solve a vexing problem.

They may be missing a bet. After all, Socrates, one of history's greatest wise guys, perfumed his ankles to assist his meditations.

The ancient Greeks even perfumed their food and household pets, said Arnold S. Berke, who sees an increasingly scented future for the American male.

After 41 Berke, executive vice president of Schiaparelli's, is one of the youngest executives in the rapidly expanding cosmetics industry.

"Men now buy about 60 per cent of the perfume sold in this country," observed Berke, a student of psychology as well as odors.

"Most of it, of course, is for women. But speaking frankly, we are headed toward a time when most men will use perfume themselves — although naturally it will be specially formulated for them."

"South American men have always worn perfume," he said, "and in Europe it was worn by more men than women, until the French revolution came along."

Berke's firm is one of several that have already come out with special new perfumes for men.

But Berke feels that the man of the future has little real choice as to whether he'll give off the fragrance of a walking pine tree or a rampant field of clover.

"The men may think they know how they want to smell," he said, "but it's the women of America who will finally decide."

The perfume industry is almost as secretive as the atomic energy commission or an international spy ring.

"There can be from 10 to 100 scents blended in a single perfume," said Berke. "The formula of a successful perfume is guarded as closely as the keys to Ft. Knox."

Although a new perfume are white or green, for some reason the most successful scents are pale amber in color. After the fragrance itself, the most important thing about a perfume is its name.

To Berke perfume is far more than a business commodity or a romantic lure.

"It is the essence of psychic mystery," he said.

"Research shows that the center of our sense of smell is also the center of our memory in the brain. Marcel Proust, the French author, smelled a biscuit dipped in oddly fragrant tea, and his wave of memory led him to write nine volumes of recollections."

"Think what Ernest Hemingway might have written if he'd poured a quart of perfume over his type-writer."

Bargains in Markets This Weekend

By The Associated Press

Housewives shopping for Sunday dinner bargains will find their selection limited this week to fish, poultry, smoked brie and ham and the cheaper cuts of lamb and beef.

Pricewise, the choicest varieties of beef, pork, lamb and veal are still pretty much in the luxury class.

Pork prices are down a shade at wholesale, portending possibly lower prices at retail in the not too distant future. But wholesale prices of beef and lamb show no inclination to fall.

Bacon prices, highest since 1954, are expected to stay that way for another month or so. They're up about 30 per cent at retail from a year ago. Eggs are down a little in some cities but not enough to make bacon and eggs a bargain dish.

Turkeys for roasting and chickens for frying or broiling continue to head the parade of best buys in the meat division. Some chains are advertising weekend specials in chuck roast, ground beef, and beef blade — all relatively low-cost items were compared to the more popular cuts like rib roast, porterhouse, and sirloin.

Seafood, either fresh or frozen, is abundant at this time of year and prices are moderate. Specials to be offered this week include perch fillets, swordfish steak, scallops and shrimp.

There's a wide variety of fresh fruits and vegetables to choose from although a few favorites, notably lettuce and carrots, have been delayed by adverse weather (too much rain in the Midwest and enough in the East).

Outstanding buys in vegetables include potatoes, yellow onions, peppers, yellow or green squash, new green cabbage, radishes, tomatoes, scallions and pascal or golden heart celery.

Eggplant, cucumber, cauliflower and yellow sweet corn are listed as good buys. Lettuce and carrots (available in quantity only from the West Coast) are relatively high in price in most cities.

Peaches are still in plentiful supply and watermelons are rated an excellent buy in most sections. Other good buys in fresh fruits include Bartlett pears and seedless grapes from California.

California may ship 100,000 tons of the juicy, yellow Bartlett this year, or 15 per cent more than in 1956. Canners have heavy stocks left over from last year and are buying less now. So there's an abundant supply for fresh fruit shippers.

Women Set Records in AAU Meet

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — World record holder Lorraine Crapp of Australia returned to action today in her specialty, the 440-yard free-style as America's best female swimmers continued their search for new records in the National AAU Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Chris von Saltza and Sylvia Ruuska, a pair of young, blond Californians, and a Los Angeles Athletic Club relay team broke three American records last night.

Miss Crapp, holder of the world 440 free style record at 4:48.6, is expected to meet both Miss Ruuska, the 440-yard individual medley titlist, and Miss von Saltza, the new 220-yard back stroke winner, in tonight's finals.

Paula Jean Myers, 22-year-old diving champion from Los Angeles, won the three-meter springboard event last night and needed only tomorrow night's platform title to complete a grand slam of AAU's five indoor and outdoor diving championships. She won both the indoor titles in April and took the outdoor one-meter Tuesday.

In three-meter competition Miss Myers scored 511.90 points to 478.00 for Irene McDonald, Toronto, Canada, Olympic diver now competing with the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Miss Ruuska, 15-year-old daughter of a Berkeley, Calif., swimming coach, had no trouble winning the individual medley event with a 5:40.5 that bettered a mark set last year by Shelley Mann of Washington, D. C.

Robinson Named Municipal Judge

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Harry C. Robinson, 34, a Little Rock attorney, is Gov. Orval Faubus' choice as municipal judge here to succeed Judge Harper Harb, who died last Sunday.

The governor said last night that he will make the appointment soon. Robinson will serve out Harb's unexpired term.

This is the second time Robinson has been named to a judicial post by gubernatorial appointment. Former Gov. Sid McMath appointed him Pulaski circuit judge in January 1953 to succeed the late Judge Gus Fulk when the latter resigned because of illness. Robinson retired from that post in December 1954.

Robinson is a native of Lake Village, Ark.

Mrs. A. L. Roysdon of Jefferson County was elected vice president and Mrs. B. V. Savage of Crittenden County secretary.

Can't Believe She Hit TV Limelight

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP)—Carol Burnett, a girl suddenly hit by TV's lighting fame, keeps telling herself, "It can't be me, it can't be me."

Miss Burnett (24 years, 5 feet 6 1/2, 120 pounds) has been in a whirl of appointments, phone calls, swarming agents and personal appearance bids since she stepped before the mike a few nights back and sang a song entitled "I Made A Fool of Myself Over John Foster Dulles."

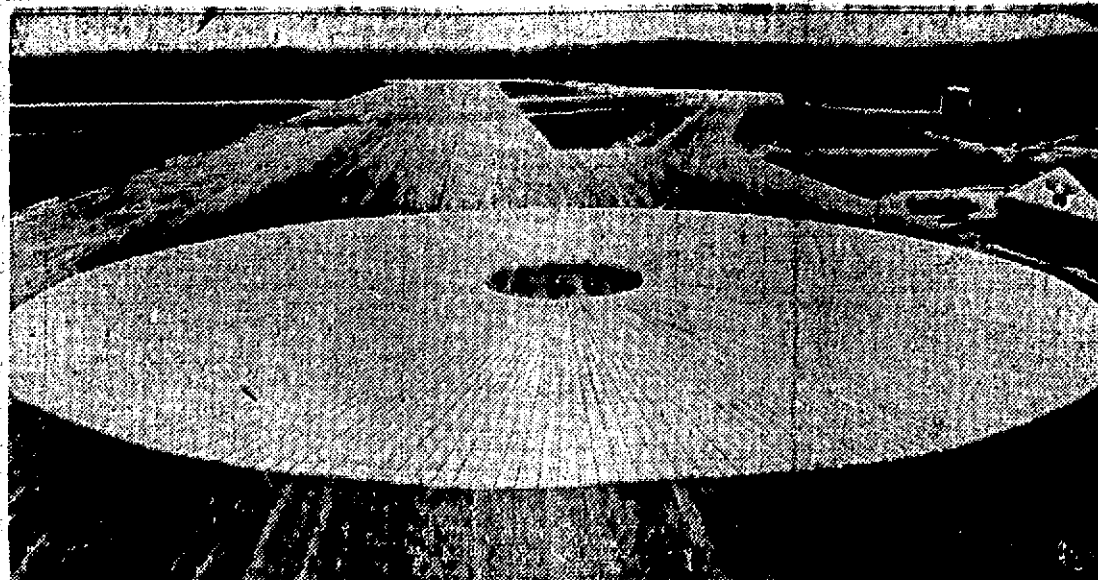

Her vocal outburst and comic accompaniment on the NBC-TV Jack Paar show evoked some squawks from sensitive viewers.

The State Department, however, reflected official amusement. The secretary himself asked for a recording, and Miss Burnett found herself clutching wildly to maintain business and personal aplomb.

Actually, Carol did the attention-grabbing song with some hesitancy.

"I guess I'm really a coward," explains the girl who hails from San Antonio via Los Angeles. Although the item had been a show-stopper since going into her act at the Blue Angel night club a month ago, Carol felt it might be misunderstood on television.

"I wouldn't ever want to offend anyone," adds the comedienne, who admits to voting Democratic.

TOPS IN TOPS—Looking like a gargantuan flying saucer, this giant, plastic roof, the largest ever built, sprawls across the landscape in Manchester, N.H. The huge translucent roof, equal in area to three football fields, will cover the United States pavilion at the 1958 World's Fair in Brussels, Belgium. Constructed of 2,100 plastic panels, manufactured by the Kalwall Corporation, it is more than 340 feet in diameter and will span a 72,000-square-foot roof area. The roof is actually a "sandwich" panel of plastic sheets over an interior aluminum grid and its rim will rest on two concentric rows of gold-colored steel columns.

"Most of all I don't know anything about politics. When I worked the song up with Ken Welch—he's a writer who does all my material—all I wanted was a sort of generalized satire on all the teen-agers who keep swooning over crooners and movie heroes."

"That's what most of my act is—satirizing types of people, not individuals."

Miss Burnett has more triumphs ahead than the sudden advantage of overnight, accidental attention. Show business veterans, before that night with Paar, had picked her with high favor. She is currently reeking up to Blue Angel's longest run.

Incidentally it is the first night club Carol has ever been in. An outdoor girl, whose idea of bliss is a camping trip with her husband, Don Saroyan, Miss Burnett neither smokes nor drinks anything stronger than ginger ale.

NEW YORK (AP)—The American Petroleum Institute has reported that daily average crude oil and condensate production in Arkansas showed a drop of 150 barrels last week. Total daily output in the state averaged 84,150 barrels.

TONITOWN (AP)—This northwest Arkansas town opened its 58th annual Gape Festival today to give thanks to circumstances which led to small group of Italian settlers to the area in 1886. The festival will continue through Saturday.

TELEPHONE TALK

By Vance Smiley, Wire Chief, Hope, Ark.

HI FOLKS

Mr. Vance Smiley, local wire chief of the Telephone Co. here in Hope, I've been with Southwestern Bell almost twenty-three years, the last ten being spent here. I have tried my hand at many different jobs, but this is my first effort as a columnist. I hope to be able to bring you the news of our business on the local level, as well as new developments and services that we can offer you. Hope is right in the middle of some "big" telephone planning and I'll try to keep you informed as these plans develop.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

I heard a story the other day that I thought was worth passing on.

It happened in an Arkansas hospital — in the hall of the maternity ward. A lady was making a call from a telephone booth there, when suddenly the door opened. She looked up and saw a bearded, expectant father peering in. He blinked in surprise, thought a minute, then said, "Oh, excuse me, I thought this was the elevator."

It's supposed to be true, and sounds like it could be. Anyway, it started me thinking about how many public telephones there are nowadays.

At the latest count there were more than 2,300 coin-operated phones in Arkansas. That's 13 per cent more than there were just a little over two years ago.

They're located wherever they're needed most — in stores, depots, service stations, public buildings of all kinds, and outdoors. I've found that a lot of times they are mighty handy things, and imagine you have 'em.

We have one in a new aluminum glass booth just inside the gate at Fair Park.

KEEPING COOL

Seems that more and more folks are getting some kind of air conditioning. And when they do, they shut their houses up tight and draw all the shades.

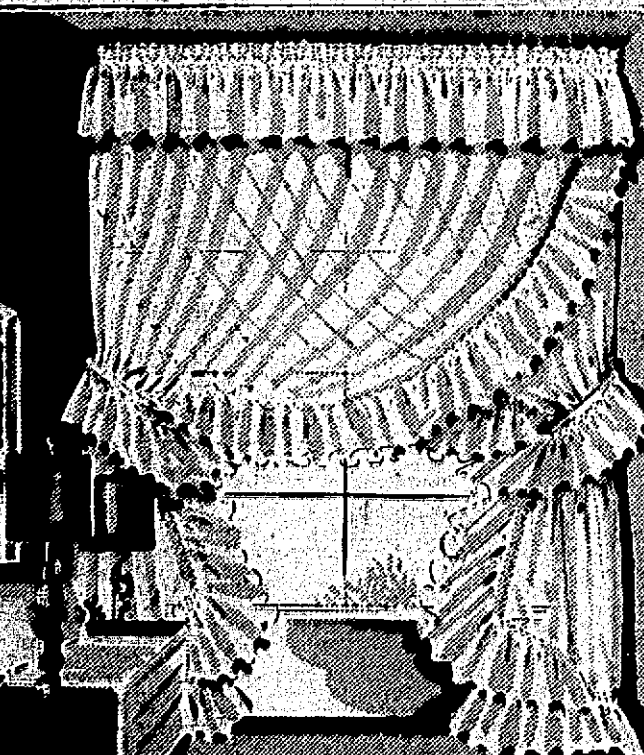

They want to keep the cool air in and the hot air out. And they don't like to open the door unless it's absolutely necessary.

I know of a gadget they might like. It's a loud-speaker that's installed outside your house at the front door. It's connected to all the telephones in your house, so that when someone rings the bell, you can find out what they want without even opening the door.

They're being tested now, and if folks like them, they'll be available to everybody someday in the future.

Call by number, it's twice as easy.

THE FLEET SHRINKS—The Navy's announced economy cut of 65 ships from the active fleet will leave only one battleship, the Wisconsin, above, on active duty. The Navy is now operating about 975 vessels of all categories. Some of the loss in fighting strength will be made up by new warships now nearing completion. After completion of the 60 deactivations and the addition of the new ships the fleet strength will be about 950. Beauty Clicks as Barefoot 'Peasant'

Sophia Loren

Before the gentlemen of Rome concluded that Italian actress Sophia Loren "out-Gina's Lolobrigida," they had ample opportunity to observe the voluptuous young beauty on the screen. At age 23, Miss Loren is a veteran of some two dozen films. In practically all of them she has displayed her charms as either a sexy peasant, or a sultry girl of the street. Overnight success and international recognition came in 1956 when she appeared as "Aida," wearing the scantiest possible Egyptian costume. In "Boy on a Dolphin," the Twentieth Century-Fox CinemaScope and color by De Luxe romantic comedy starting Sunday at Saenger theater, she continues to uphold the claim of the Roman gentlemen. Co-starred with Alan Ladd and Clifton Webb, Miss Loren plays a poor Greek girl who cannot afford a bathing suit. She goes sponge diving by tucking under a sunken ship, and under her belt in back. Under water she discovers a priceless statue of the boy

U. S. Diplomats Leave Syria

DAMASCUS (AP) — Three American diplomats, accused by Syria of plotting to overthrow its government and ordered out of the country, left Syria today for neighboring Lebanon.

Syrian border authorities said that Howard Stone, second secretary for political affairs, and Vice Consul Francis Gilon drove across the border into Lebanon. Lt. Col. Robert W. Molloy, the U. S. military attaché, also left Damascus.

All three were declared persona non grata yesterday and were told to leave the country within 24 hours.

The U. S. Embassy agreed — but under protest.

Four New Polio Cases in Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK (UP) — Four new cases of polio were reported in Arkansas for the week ending last Saturday, according to the morbidity report released today by the State Board of Health.

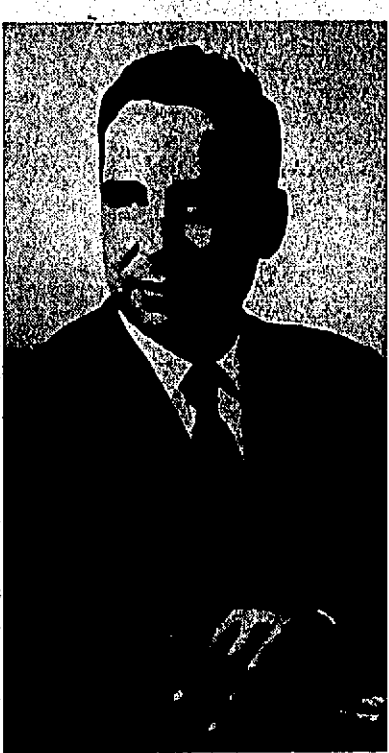

They brought the year's total to 47, compared with 73 at the same time a year ago. They were three above the one case reported the previous week, but eight below the 12 the same week a year ago.

Garland and Newton counties had one case each of paralytic polio, and Columbia and Pulaski counties had one case each of non-paralytic. The Pulaski case was in North Little Rock.

To date this year, the state has had 17 cases of paralytic polio, and 30 cases of non-paralytic. A year ago, it was 47 cases of paralytic and 26 cases of non-paralytic.

PFC Declines to Enter Rate Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Power Commission has declined to step into a controversy over whether Reynolds Metals Co. is paying proper rates for power supplied to an Arkansas aluminum reduction plant from the Southwestern Power Administration.

The plant is at Arkadelphia. Yesterday, the commission dismissed an application by Secretary of the Interior Seaton asking it to determine that rates in a 1952 contract with Reynolds and Arkansas Power Light Co. no longer are effective.

At the same time, it was announced that the FPC has approved a 27 per cent rate increase in wholesale firm sales of electric power by the SPA.

A power marketing agency of the Interior Department, SPA sells power to rural cooperatives and other customers in Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Louisiana and Texas.

The rate increase, which is retroactive to Aug. 1, will affect an estimated 350,000 farmers in the five states.

Under the 1952 contract, SPA sells power to APL, which in turn supplies Reynolds for operation of the Arkadelphia plant.

Seaton said currently the Reynolds rate is about 5.5 mills per kilowatt-hour, compared with 8.27 mills to be charged preference customers under commission approved schedules.

New Alarm System Is Working Fine

By ELTON C. FAY

POINT BARROW, Alaska (AP) — The Distant Early Warning (DEW) Line, a 3,000-mile-long chain of radar stations guarding North America's northern rim, has been operating in test for months and already has shown "100 per cent" capability, says a ranking U.S. airman.

Brig. Gen. Stanley Way, chief of the U. S. Air Force electronic defense system, made the evaluation yesterday at a formal ceremony marking formal delivery of Dewline by the builders, the Western Electric Co., to the government.

In the first public demonstration for newsmen, the Dewline station here picked up an Air Force jet bomber far out over the Polar Sea.

Way said in a variety of tests during the last month B-47 jet bombers have tried to penetrate the line at high, medium and low altitude from various approaches out over the Arctic Ocean.

Newsmen watched yesterday's demonstration in the darkened console room of a radar station. They saw a pinpoint of light on a luminous screen. As they entered the room, a B-47 was approaching at 33,000 feet altitude from 140 miles out. It closed distance rapidly out meanwhile, a test message was sent flashing on its way south for relay to Colorado Springs, Colo., headquarters of Air Defense Command.

The bomber was out of sight and soundless as it made its first high pass over Dewline, then turned back for a low pass.

Approximately 600 civilian employees of the Federal Electric Corp. man the continent-spanning Dewline stations. An estimated half billion dollars has been spent on the line.

At a news conference, Way also gave these answers to questions: "No Soviet planes 'that we know of' have been picked up by Dewline stations so far.

Present Dewline equipment is designed for detection of objects the size of bombers. It is possible that jet fighters could get through the line undetected but it is highly unlikely that such short range aircraft would be used by an enemy at the vast range involved in a strike toward the United States.

Dewline could pick up guided missiles at reasonable altitude but with present equipment could not pick up ballistic missiles.

Dewline stations actually ring a warning bell. Audible signals sound to alert operators as a plane penetrates the line. This is in addition to a visual radar scanning system, and photographing of radar image for sending detailed information to Air Defense Command.

Instead of the 600 men now manning the line, it would need 5,000 if no audible system were used, Way said.

Unable to Crack Rights Stalemate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to compromise Senate and House differences over civil rights legislation were blocked at least for the present today.

Rep. Keating (R-N.Y.) moved to break a House stalemate. He sought unanimous consent to send the civil rights bill to conference with the Senate and try to work out a compromise.

Immediately a dozen or more members jumped to their feet to object. Speaker Rayburn of Texas recognized Rep. Walter (D-Pa.) to make the single objection needed to kill the move to rewrite the bill in a compromise session.

The issue is whether to accept something on the order of the bill which the Senate passed—and to which President Eisenhower has objected—or shut the dispute to a conference in the hope of arriving at a compromise.

After Keating's move was blocked, Rep. Celler (D-N.Y.) asked unanimous consent of the House to send the bill directly back to the Senate with a compromise amendment narrowing a controversial jury trial provision to voting rights cases only.

Keating objected to that procedure.

Republican leaders had said earlier that Eisenhower would not tie a party to any deal to tie a softened civil rights bill to bigger foreign aid funds.

The House Republican leader, Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, called it a wild rumor.

Ex-Arkansan to Be Executed

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Earl Long said yesterday the execution of Joseph Sheffield, formerly of Crossett, Ark., will take place Friday as scheduled.

Sheffield's death will end a 4-year legal fight over his conviction.

The 29-year-old ex-convict was convicted in 1953 after the shotgun death of Dr. John L. Walker, brother of a Franklin Parish sheriff in June 1953.

known in Hope. The Tol-E-Text Co., contracted the central heating and cooling system, and Johnson Electric Co. (Now the Gordon Electric Co.) contracted the electrical work.

"All the people who worked on this building gave us a first class job," said Mr. Ellis, "and we are proud of our new building. We needed more room and this additional space with better office arrangement will make it possible to better take care of the increased business we expect from this move."

The assets of Hope Federal are nearly three times as much as they were in 1953, and with our added facilities we expect a much more rapid growth in the future. The Greening Insurance & Realty Co. too, has experienced a steady growth, and we are very optimistic about the future of Hope and these two institutions in our office," Mr. Ellis said.

The Hope Federal Savings & Loan Association was organized in 1934 by J. P. Duffie, N. T. Jewell, Albert Graves the late E. S. Greening, and several other Hope busness men. Mr. Duffie, Mr. Jewell and Mr. Graves still serve as officers and directors of the association, and Fred Ellis was elected secretary after the death of J. C. The Association now makes all types of real estate loans — conventional loans, Title 1 improvement loans, and FHA and GI loans.

In July of last year Fred Ellis bought out the interest of Frank Hill, and he is now the sole owner of the firm.

"Although none of the members of the Greening family are now financially interested in the firm," said Mr. Ellis, "we plan to always keep the name of the firm as Greening Insurance & Realty Co., Mr. Greening was a very fine gentleman and a good business man and he built up a reputation for fair dealing in business. We consider ourselves fortunate to inherit such a fine name in business, and we pledge ourselves to continue to uphold the reputation and traditions of this firm."

The personnel of the firm now consists of Miss Marcine Abbott, Mrs. Neva Byrd, Miss Linda Gilbert, Mrs. Pauline McPherson, Duffie D. Booth and H. K. McMurrugh.

Polish Police Called Out in Labor Strike

By COLIN FROST

LODZ, Poland (AP)—Clubwielding police and troops crashed a crippling three day transport strike today. Hundreds of troops took over streetcar barns which until early morning had been held by strikers.

Transport men reported 40 workers arrested in fights with police and with the "workers' militia," Communist toughs who help keep order.

Authorities insisted no one had been jailed but said some strikers were under house arrest.

The government announced that a mixed state and trade union commission will open hearings into the strikers' grievances Friday. The strike started Monday in support of wage demands.

The authorities decided to act last night after strike leaders, unwilling to identify themselves, refused to negotiate, and stood by demands for a written promise of a pay hike.

First "workers' militia" men were put into car barns. Armed, helmeted police followed and finally the army moved in.

The first streetcars on the street early today had armed policemen besides the motorman. Later the police were withdrawn. By 11 o'clock the authorities pulled out the military and civil trucks which had kept the 700,000 population moving.

West Meets on Private With Russian

LONDON (AP)—Western disarmament delegates met in private with Soviet spokesman Valerian Zorin today to try and clarify Russia's present stand on disarmament.

The meeting, reported by Russian sources, apparently was designed to clarify a sharp speech yesterday in which Zorin accused the United States of overoptimism.

The speech left Western delegates to the United Nations Disarmament subcommittee puzzled. They agreed that on any account it was discouraging. But they were mystified by the fact that Zorin seemed to be talking about two different things as if they were one and the same.

French Have Some Strange TV Programs

By WILLIAM GLOVER
PARIS (AP) — "Most of all," sighed the lady with a shrug of pretty Gallic shoulders, "they want the program that does not tire the brain."

Michelle Rebel, programming head of Television Francaise, was ticking off the catalog of events, recipes, remote control shows and films designed to: entertain, enlighten, educate and otherwise relieve ennui in 700,000 French homes 50 hours per week — reduced to 30 hours in July and August.

"At times," continued Mrs. Rebel, "they just do not understand what we are trying to do."

We assured her TV fans were pretty much like that even in the United States — at least, so far as the rating experts have determined.

"There is only one way to get a big audience response," she continued. "That is to put on some show they do not like."

At the present stage of TV development in France, the audience is most vocal over wanting more sports events (how about that, Mel Allen?) and a small taste of opera (where's Milton Cross?)

Mrs. Rebel on request comes up with some statistics on the situation as fast in France as was

"Television has not perhaps grown as fast in France as was intended," she explained, "but by 1960 the entire nation will be covered."

Twenty transmitters currently cover 60 per cent of the population, an increase of 6 stations and 15 per cent since last year. By next year 80 per cent of the people will be embraced in the transmission area. The less populous southwest region, where there also happens to be some mountains to bother the engineers, is the chief uncovered sector.

The 700,000 TV sets now in use contrast with six million radio sets. For comparison, there are some 40 million TV sets in the United States and almost everyone has at least one radio.

As happened in the United States the first big consumer demand in France for receivers occurred in limited-budget families. A set costs about $250.

All of France's TV action takes place on one state-supervised channel. Receivers are set for that single spot on the dial only, except in fringe areas where the annual 6,000-franc license fee ($14 also wins a tuning dial that will bring in perhaps Luxembourg, Brussels, the Saar or Monte Carlo — complete with commercials.

The programming as outlined by Mrs. Rebel includes some strange sequences.

Rights Issue Settles to War of Nerves

By B. L. LIVINGSTONE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The civil rights conflict in Congress settled down to a political war of nerves today with House Republicans renewing talk of a special session in November to settle the issue.

As adjournment fever gripped Congress, a new move was made by Rep. Keating (R-NY) to break the stalemate and get the Senate-passed bill headed toward the House floor for a vote.

The bill, with its controversial jury trial amendment, rested on the desk of Speaker Rayburn of Texas. The objections yesterday barred direct House action, and Rayburn has not yet moved to send it to the Rules Committee to elicit a new course.

Keating, chief strategist for GOP civil rights forces, addressed a letter to Chairman Smith (D-Va.) of the Rules Committee, asking him to take the initiative and schedule hearings on the bill.

Smith is an avowed foe of any civil rights legislation. At his committee office yesterday, aides said they did not know Smith's whereabouts.

In the likely event Smith ignores the request, Keating drafted a follow-up resolution to send the bill to a Senate-House conference for rewriting more nearly to President Eisenhower's specifications.

The resolution would have to be approved by the Rules Committee and subsequently voted on by the House.

The House yesterday blocked rival Republican and Democratic moves either to send the bill to conference or to accept the Senate bill along lines advocated by Democrats. Both moves required unanimous consent.

KILLED IN ACCIDENT

HAZEN (AP) — A car — truck collision on U.S. Highway 70 near here yesterday killed a 4-year-old Negro boy and injured eight other Negroes.

Dead was James Everett Portland.

State Police said the Negroes, all members of a Tulsa, Okla., family, had attended a funeral at Brinkley, Ark., and were on their way home.

Norwegian exporters report a growing market in seaweed meal for both animal and human consumption.

The Tuesday drama gives way to a personality interview; and Wednesday's circus or music hall yields to a panel discussing the book of the week.

"That's a wonderful program," enthuses Michaelle. "So many closeups of hands and feet!"

CHAPTER XXVII

Blanchard knew we didn't have much chance of finding Peterson but I could see where he might want to get out of Blue Springs for a while. He had good reason to be sick of the sight of the town.

Blanchard said, "You got any objections to looking over Clements' place?"

"No."

We turned off the trail half an hour later and hit for high ground a mile east of the river. The north ridge of Buffalo Basin came up against the sky as we moved out of the bottom land and then the buildings of Clements place showed against the prairie near the river. Blanchard got down and squatted and pulled a long stem of grass and chewed on it. I got down beside him and waited for him to say what he had on his mind. He moved around the buildings a mile away and the yard was jammed with wagons. That was ordinary; I wondered what Blanchard expected to see.

I pulled my rifle out of the scabbard. "You reckon this rifle would carry?"

"Sure. You might even hurt somebody with a lucky shot."

I laid the sights on the Clements' cabin and then followed a man carrying a pail away from the door. He was a black dog in the sights. Blanchard didn't move or say anything. He knew I wasn't fool enough to shoot.

I said, "Could be that Peterson went out to talk to the Clements."

"He can talk to the Clements if he wants. Might help if he did."

We waited half an hour or so and I didn't get more than half a dozen words out of Blanchard. Finally he said, "Pike, sure looks like they're getting ready to hunt buffalo. Just like nothing happened and nothing will."

We mounted and Blanchard moved out north and I followed the sun now strong in a warm breeze. Blanchard's bay had been fighting him to run and finally Blanchard waved and let him go hard for half a mile and my gelding rambled along behind. I liked the wild feeling of the air flying past my face and the horse moving fast under me but I kept a sharp eye for prairie dog holes and hoped the gelding was doing the same. Then Blanchard pulled the bay own to an easy lope in we stayed in that gait until we hit the last long climb before the river and the horses were willing to break down to a reaching walk.

We had almost hit the crest when I heard it. It was more like wind than anything, a thin rustling noise like a spring breeze through the trees down at the river. But the air was still and there wasn't a tree for half a mile. Blanchard heard it then, too, and pulled up at the crest of the slope and waited for me. The sound changed when I came up to Blanchard. It was deeper, like it came up out of the ground. Then above it rose a sound that was thin at first, then grew until it was hoarse and rolling and coming up stronger all the time. I knew it then.

Blanchard!

At first, just a long, thick line of dust hung between yellow prairie and the sky. Then I could see the dark, moving ribbon of the first great herd storming over the grass, heading into the wind, making a straggling dusty run to the river.

We sat there and watched a lot longer than was safe, the horses stirring under us, trying to edge down the slope toward the water. I'd never seen the buffaloes come that way before but I'd heard the oldtimers tell about it. Always I'd seen them come in little bunches at first, grazing along as easy as you please, the red-yellow calves risked around the cows, then running hard down the slope to the river. Or one night the prairie would be clear and the next morning they would be there by the thousands east of town.

The lead animals took on shape as they rambled along, their great shaggy heads down and their thick humped shoulders pushing forward. The sound was so strong now that it came from all sides, from the ground and from the sky and from the wind. Back from the charging leaders stretched the biggest herd I'd ever seen, spreading thick like a waving brown forest over the prairie. The lead bulls, tails in the air, black tongues hanging out a foot, broke over the hill and roared down the slope to the river, pushed from behind, here and there one stumbling and being swallowed up by the hundreds following.

I had the feeling then that the prairie belonged to the buffaloes. Me and Blanchard had no business there. Looking south along our ridge, I saw a lot of other folks, some mounted, some afoot, who had come out from Blue Springs for the sight. A big stub horn bull stood straight across the river from us, up to his knees in mud, chewing his cud, his long whiskers hanging into the water. I took out my Sharps and checked the sights and laid them on the bull, just back of the forelegs and about a third of the way up the body. A good lung shot.

I cleared my throat. "Don't hardly seem right. Not just to test out a new gun."

Blanchard put his hand on my shoulder. "A great animal, Pike. Some say he's stupid. I say he's stubborn."

CHAPTER XXVIII

We ate at the hotel, me and Blanchard. It was quiet in the dining room and coming on hot. There wasn't even much clatter in the kitchen. I didn't order much and I didn't eat all of what I ordered. Blanchard paid and I said it was my turn but he shook his head.

Blanchard lit the smoke, flipped the match 20 feet into the street and blew out a cloud. "What happens to you after we get Dorsey back?"

I shrugged. "Nothing. Outside of my skin getting hung on a rusty nail out at the Clements."

Blanchard nodded. "So if you got any sense you'll get ready right now. When Dorsey comes in, you head out, fast."

I looked out the wagon road north, where there was country hadn't even heard much about. "Where'd I go?"

"Head out a hundred miles, file on some ground and farm it."

"I got no money."

"You've got a team and wagon. And a good rifle. Kill some buffalo, sell some hides, pack some bones. If that's not enough, I'll stake you until you get a crop."

"I'm much obliged, Harney. I saw Owen sitting in the harness room, wiping at his face with a dirty bandanna. I thought maybe I should tell him that I was packing. There were some back pay owed to me and if I didn't give him some warning, he might not have cash to pay me. More than likely I'd be needing every cent I could get my hands on. I went back to the doorway. "Owen," I said, "I might be heading out tonight, I mean for good."

Owen's jaw dropped and the thickness wobbled under his chin. "Why, where might you be going?"

"Don't know. I'll be needing my back pay."

"You hadn't ought to go, Pike. No need to go."

"Blanchard laid it on the line. He expects them to turn Dorsey loose this afternoon or maybe tonight. Then Blanchard'll take him and get you know, what'll happen to me if I stick."

Owen took a step toward me. He said, "It's all done with . . . the trouble?"

I thought right then that Owen was a little disappointed, afraid he might get cheated out of some excitement. Maybe a lot of folks were like that, liking a fight if they could hide from it and watch it.

"No," I said. "It's not all done with."

I left then and let him puzzle it out. I looked at Pilot and ladled him some oats and he munched it fine. At least his appetite was picking up. I knew I have to go easy with him on the trail for a while. I went up to the loft and rolled my extra shirt in my blankets and looked around. There was the frying pan to take and the tin cup and my old war bag to hold extra rifle shells and an old skinning knife and some food. And my lantern. And my canteen. It didn't turn out to be much.

When I went down Owen was standing with some money in his hand and he gave it to me. Seventeen dollars. It seemed about right so I didn't bother to figure it up. I didn't think Owen would cheat me. I went own to Carter's and bought the jerky. Then I went to the hotel. Blanchard was standing, waiting for me.

Blanchard came down the steps and we walked around the corner and past the depot and along the tracks to Peterson's office.

It was a small office but Peterson did a lot of business in it. Blanchard went in through the open door and I followed. Peterson sat at a dark brown desk that looked twice as big as a man might need.

He had his hat off and a cigar in his mouth and I can't say he looked happy to see us. Me, in particular. Waiting for Blanchard to talk, I just looked out the window at the racks of bleached buffalo bones that stretched along the tracks as far as I could see like a great dead wall.

Blanchard said, "You have anything to say to me, Mr. Peterson?"

Peterson bumped ashes off his cigar onto the floor. He said, "It would just be noise in the wind."

"Maybe not. Pike says you got something on your mind."

"That's between me and Pike. No law forces me to tell you."

"Law?" A quick smile came over Blanchard's mouth. "Law, in Blue Springs?"

Peterson frowned. "There's more than one kind of law, Blanchard. I've been wondering what kind it is you represent."

"United States law," Mr. Peterson.

Peterson rose and came around the desk and leaned on a corner of it. "Law, marshal, is to prevent trouble, not make it. There's too much blood in your law for my taste. And another thing. For a lawman, you keep strange company."

I didn't want to spoil it for Blanchard by getting too mad so I just threw a look at Peterson and stepped outside. I stayed close against the wall, though, so

I could hear. Blanchard said, "All right. It sounded like he was a little mad, too. All right, Mr. Peterson. You listen now. I had to take Pike Ambrose at face value when I came into this town because there wasn't anybody else with guts enough to back up the law. I don't care what his father was or what he was before I hit town. In my book he's a good man."

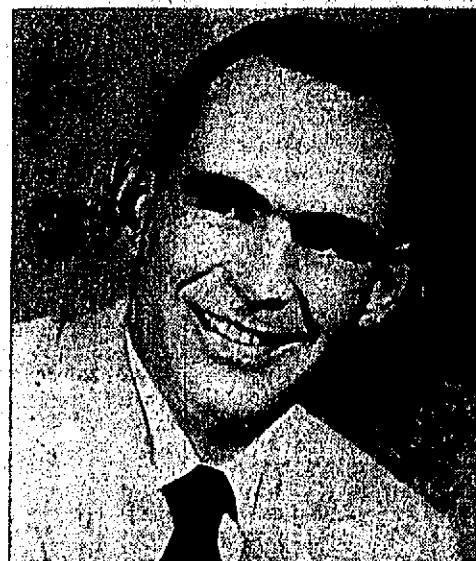

I heard Peterson draw a deep breath. I don't think anybody had ever talked like that before to Jordan Peterson.
